

7 and 8th months in PREGNANCY

October 14, 1982

I am presently 34 weeks pregnant. I will deliver on November 29, (or I should say that 11/29/82 is my due date.

Thanks to God and Forever Living Aloe Vera Juice, I'm on my way down hill.

When I first went to see my doctor he diagnosed me as being a "high risk pregnancy" because they found protein in my urine (another word for protein in urine is albumin). My blood pressure was also very high.

Now, let me back track. I've always had protein in my urine since I was sixteen years old. I have always spilled between 1 and 2 grams of protein everytime I have seen a physician. I've had numerous kidney tests but they never show up any problems.

So all of a sudden I'm pregnant and my doctor tells me I must be monitored every 2 weeks. This includes doing a 24 hour specimen everytime I see the doctor.

When I first started Aloe Vera Al and Virginia suggested I drink 4 oz., 2 oz. in a.m. and 2 oz. in p.m. (I've continued to drink 2 oz. in a.m. and 2 oz. in p.m.) My main goal was to keep my blood pressure down, I just always assumed I would spill protein in my urine the rest of my life.

As the months went on my blood pressure stayed down pretty much, at some appointments it was normal, other times up slightly. I myself think the reason my blood pressure was up was because I usually had to rush from my job to my appointment, also the pressure from constantly thinking if my urine would pass the test.

When I was 7 months pregnant my husband went with me to my doctor's appointment. My doctor informed my husband I would probably be in the hospital soon because he expected my protein level in my urine to be up to 7 grams and then at that point labor would be induced, if that didn't work a cesarean section would be performed. He frightened my husband to the point he said I would have no more children.

The reason the doctor did not like the looks of the protein in the urine or the high blood pressure, these are signs of toxemia which if severe both mother and baby could die.

I have never felt so good in my entire life.

....Now for the good news! On Tuesday, October 12, 1982 when I went for my appointment I only showed a trace, yes a trace, of protein in my urine first time in 13 years.

So once again I give thanks to God and Aloe Vera (Forever Living) Juice. I'm sold on it!!

You can bet my baby will be an Aloe Vera Baby!!
